

Lost Creek Cemetery

LOST CREEK CEMETERY located in the Central Peninsula Wildlife Management area of Union County. One of the oldest cemeteries in Union County (formerly Campbell County). The first person buried here was a man who died while visiting Henry Rice, a Revolutionary War soldier. There are hundreds of graves marked with only field stones. Many were babies and some were entire families that died with typhoid and are buried in a common grave.

“FOOTPRINTS ADDENDUM” 2000 EDITION

ADDITIONS & CORRECTIONS April 2005

This is a listing of changes to the 2000 edition of footprints. The changes will include spelling corrections, new markers for previously unmarked grave sites or grave sites that had only been marked with a fieldstone, stones that have been repaired, stones that have been reset, stones that have been cleaned, stones that have been found during the cleaning of a cemetery, and added markers to a grave site that has been marked but due to weathering and age the older stone became to hard to read. Some of these unmarked graves, and graves that had been marked with only a fieldstone may have been included in the 2000 edition of “Footprints”. Many of the unmarked graves were those that were moved by the Tennessee Valley Authority in the 1930’s. The burial sites for the unmarked graves were known to us from plate surveys and field notes done by TVA at that time and which we have obtained copies. Also from TVA records we have included some known graves that were not moved and still reside Union County but are under the waters of Norris Lake. This list will be an ongoing feature of the Union County Cemeteries Association web site at, www.usgennet.org/usa/tn/county/union2/, and any future additions or corrections that are added to it and will be earmarked. These and any other changes will also be published in the Union County Historical Society quarterly “Pathways” for those who do not have internet access.
